The exotic cockerels of Rhode Island Red or White Leghorn breeds in Key village areas at the rate of 200 cockerels are distributed in each Key Village Centre in alternative years. The indigenous cockerels obtained in exchange are removed from the area. The surplus desi cockerels are also chemically castrated to render them ineffective and finally disposed of. At the central hatchery, eggs obtained from the villagers are hatched, chicks reared up to eight weeks and only graded females are returned to their owners withholding the graded male chicks which are disposed of for table purposes. The staff employed help the villages in the upgrading process, protect the birds in the area against contagious diseases, carry out propaganda and render technical help and advice.

The cost for each centre is Rs. 4,500, i.e., Rs. 3,900 non-recurring towards the cost of cockerels and incubators and Rs. 600 recurring towards organization for Poultry Shows and contingent charges.

The Government have already taken measures to overcome the shortage of B.T. teachers. Five Government Training Colleges (one for B.T. Basic, three for men and one for women) and four training colleges under private managements have been opened since 1955–56. Though the facilities for the training of B.T. teachers have been doubled since 1955–56, the shortage of B.T. teachers persists because the available training capacity has not been utilised in full. The Government are taking steps to meet this problem.

Surplus Waters of Coleroon

223 Q.—SRI K. R. VISWANATHAN : Will the Hon. the Minister for Works be pleased to state with reference to the answer given to question No. 461 on 18th February 1959—

- (a) when the investigation is likely to be completed ;
- (b) whether there was any objection by the villagers affected by the scheme ; and
- (c) the names of villages which may get submerged in the prospective reservoir ?

A.—(a), (b) & (c). There are two proposals under consideration on the Marudayar river—

- (1) Formation of tank across Marudayar near Gudalur or other places in Perambalur taluk.

25th March 1960]

The investigation of this scheme has not been taken up, since the question of the suitability of the water for cultivation is under correspondence with the Agriculture Department.

(2) Formation of reservoir across Marudayar lower down near Kadambur in Udayarpalayam taluk.

The investigation of the scheme is likely to be completed by the end of March 1960. Representations objecting to the formation of the reservoir at this site have been received. Following are the villages that are likely to be submerged :—

- (1) Kadambur,
- (2) Kilanatham,
- (3) Allanduriyar Kattalai (Sirukudi),
- (4) Punganguli,
- (5) Chinnapathakadu and
- (6) Udayavarthiniur.

The feasibility of storing the surplus of the Coleroon river in smaller reservoirs than in one main reservoir is under investigation, so that the people of lands affected at each site may not be very many.

Indian Central Oilseeds Committee's aid for research work

251 Q.—SRI K. SATTANATHA KARAYALAR : Will the Hon. the Minister for Home be pleased to state the details of research work carried on under aid from the Indian Central Oilseeds Committee ?

[25th March 1960]

A.—The required particulars are furnished in the annexure below.

ANNEXURE.

Details of research work done so far in respect of the schemes financed by Indian Central Oilseeds Committee.

1. Scheme for fundamental research on cytology of the groundnut in the Madras State.—The Scheme aims at the collection of wild species of Arachis and geographical races of the cultivated groundnut, to study their performance and behaviour and production of new forms through inter-specific hybridisation. Twelve species of Arachis both seed grown and vegetatively propagated have been introduced. Among these, both 40 and 20 chromosomed plants are met with. Species hybrides involving the cultivated groundnut and A. monticola and A. Villosa have been obtained. Four hundred and sixty-nine samples of groundnut varieties and forms were obtained from ten foreign countries and seven Indian States. The variability is limited and inter-specific hybridisation has induced greater variability. Apart from hardiness and vigour, the wild species are capable of imparting the thin shelled character to the pods.

2. Scheme for research on the physiology of groundnut in Madras State.—The above scheme was started to institute studies on the physiological aspects of the groundnut plant, to obtain fundamental information on these various aspects, viz., nutrition, dormancy, duration, effect of trace elements, etc., and to find out methods of tackling connected problems. Various experiments and studies have been conducted under both pot culture and field conditions. Chief among them are—

(a) Dormancy of the spreading groundnut can be broken by a simple temperature treatment, viz., storage at 40°C.

(b) Deficiencies of the major nutrients, particularly, N, P and K considerably restrict the growth of the groundnut plant and affect its yield, besides producing characteristic visual deficiency symptoms.

(c) Indications were obtained on the beneficial effect of boron applied to the soil on yield and setting of pods and of zinc on plant growth.

3. Scheme for the intensive breeding of groundnut in Madras State.—The Scheme aims at the evolution of new improved strains (dormant, bounch strain, white seeded type and big seeded desert type) through pure line selection and hybridisation. Four hundred and twenty-seven new varieties were studied and promising ones advanced to yield tests. One hundred and forty-nine selections are in early stages of trial, while 536 are to be advanced for the initial trials. From a study of hybrid progenies numbering 1,459, a total of 1,911 single plant selections were made for further study.

4. Scheme for the improvement of Pollachi Red groundnut in Madras State.—The scheme was started with a view to evolve groundnut strains with high yield and oil content and dormant nature of seeds suited to the Pollachi tract. Seven mass selections and seven pure line selections are now under final stages of trial at the Groundnut Research Station, Pollachi. Nearly, 634 single plant selections are under various stages of trial. Induction of dormancy through hybridisation in the Pollachi Red Groundnut is also one of the items under way.

25th March 1960]

5. Scheme for research on storages of cakes and seeds of groundnut in Madras State.—A comprehensive study of the storage of groundnut seeds and cake and also to devise methods to prevent deterioration in quality due to storage and also a study of insect pests and diseases of attacking groundnut and groundnut cake while in storage and methods of their control are being made under the scheme.

6. Scheme for devising manually operated and bullock-driven machinery at Coimbatore.—The scheme aims to investigate the development of implements or devices for manual operation as well as by bullock power, such as decorticators for seed purposes, graders, seed drill attachment to bullock power or to country plough to evolve modifications, to adopt the existing grain thrashers to suit groundnut crop and to design and construct a suitable drying chamber for peanuts, implements like groundnut grader, groundnut decorticator, groundnut harvester and picker.
